

2nd Annual Interdisciplinary WZB Conference 2026

“Challenges to International Orders: Causes and Consequences”

7–9 October 2026 at the WZB Berlin Social Science Center

Submission Deadline: 23 April 2026

Great Powers and less powerful states alike increasingly act outside international law. New alliances and rivalries are emerging. The declining importance of the UN Security Council and NATO, wars, as well as the weaponization of tariffs and technology, seem to wash away international norms and institutions, especially the liberal ones. Moreover, many voices from the Global South demand a new order that ends what they consider Western domination. What many once saw as a stable global order —understood as the set of institutions, norms, and power relations that structure interactions among states and across borders —now appears more fragmented, contested, and open to decline, or at least transformation.

The 2nd Annual Interdisciplinary WZB Conference, to be held at the WZB in Berlin, addresses these challenges to international orders. The annual interdisciplinary WZB conferences are dedicated to combine insights from the different social sciences to address major challenges of our times. The conference will bring together researchers from political science, sociology, economics, and law to examine how international orders are being challenged and reshaped—and what this means for states, societies, and global cooperation.

This year’s organizing committee includes Nicola Fuchs-Schündeln, Steffen Huck, Yasemin Soysal, and Michael Zürn.

Confirmed keynote speakers and panelists are:

- Anita Gohdes, Hertie School Berlin
- Charles A. Kupchan, Georgetown University
- Clémence Lenoir, Economic Advisor to President Emmanuel Macron
- Cristiane Lucena Carneiro, University of Sao Paulo
- Abraham L. Newman, Georgetown University and CEPR
- Dani Rodrik, Harvard University and CEPR
- Beth Simmons, University of Pennsylvania
- Xuefeng Sun, Tsinghua University
